

Reference & Access - Appraisals for Value or Authenticity

The Briscoe Center for American History staff cannot perform appraisals, but they can help you identify standard published reference works such as American Book-Prices Current and Bookman's Price Index that contain information, such as past auction records, that might help you determine the market value of your items, especially books. Additionally, here is a list of Austin-area appraisers whom you might wish to hire to establish market value or authenticity. Inclusion within this list does not imply endorsement by the Briscoe Center, nor does the Briscoe Center assume responsibility for arrangements made with these appraisers. The Briscoe Center will not recommend appraisers. Please contact these appraisers directly concerning fees and arrangements.

Only appraisers with skills which align with the Briscoe Center's collection strengths will be included on the list. We suggest that you also contact rare, used, or out-of-print book dealers in your area. For further information on questions about rare books and book values, please visit the Association of College and Research Libraries' Rare Books and Manuscripts Section Web page "Your Old Books."
